GREENSPAN TO DELIVER MONETARY POLICY TESTIMONY FEB. 28

WASHINGTON---House Financial Services Chairman Michael G. Oxley (OH) and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan have agreed on February 28 as the date for the full Committee to receive monetary policy testimony.

"It will be a special occasion to welcome Chairman Greenspan to the new House Financial Services Committee," Oxley said.

The Committee will issue its official notice of the hearing at a later date, when the time will also be announced.

As required by a recent provision of law, the Federal Reserve Board Chairman is required to appear before the congressional committees of jurisdiction twice a year, once to the Senate and once to the House. Appearance before the other body is upon request.
